WINTER IN THE WAKE OF A SUMMER DAY

SNOW IN NORTHWEST STATES ICY FINGERS GRIPPING CANADA

Mercury Dips To Low Records For September---The Dominions Grain Belt Is Blanketed White---Cold Snap Is Sweeping Eastward---Unharvested Crop of Wheat Destroyed---Loss Estimated At $12,000,000.

King Winter's heralds stalked out of the Northern Rockies Friday and advanced across the northwest to cap with snow and frost the rout of Indian summer.

Wyoming and Montana, the Dakotas, Nebraska and finally Iowa and Minnesota experienced successively their first snowfalls of the season.

All suffered frost, too, as did Kansas.

Friday night the storm was moving into Wisconsin and across the Great Lakes, bringing to many localities the lowest temperatures ever experienced in September.

The storm's whim brought more rain to flood-racked Illinois, a fall of more than four inches centering at Ottawa, Illinois, where five factories were compelled to close, two railroads and an interurban line suspended service and a number of the inhabitants were driven from their homes by rising water.

Canada's grain belt was ankle deep in snow from Winnipeg to British Columbia, with damage to unharvested crops estimated at $12,000,000.

Ohio, at the eastern end of the storm zone, was computing the losses from a cyclonic storm which killed a child and caused $300,000 damage as it swept thru the state Friday night.

Originating in the Upper Rocky mountains the phenomenal cold wave brought to Seattle the lowest September temperature since 1887 and sent the mercury down six degrees at Helena, Montana.

It scurried on thru Wyomnig, the Dakotas and Nebraska, bringing six inches of snow to several North Dakota points near the Canadian line, and heavy falls at Rapid City and Pierre, South Dakota and Crawford, Nebraska.

The temperature fell 40 degrees in 24 hours at Omaha, to 41, and Allance Nebraska, reported a temperature of 20. At Goodland, Kansas, frost was felt when the mercury fell 54 degrees in 12 hours.

At Dodge City, Kansas, a fall of 56 degrees was experienced over night.

Snow fell at Albert Lea, Minnesota, and Cedar Rapids, Iowa, as the storm moved eastward and Evanston, Illinois reported a trace of snow, followed by rain and hail.

Friday night killing frosts were general over all the states in the storm area west of the Mississippi river.

Farmers in Iowa were warned Friday to select their seed corn and gather it before Friday night's frosts. Much of Iowa's corn is immature. Kansas's corn crop is out of danger but kaffir and alfalfa face heavy damage.

Farther north, in Minnesota and the Dakotas, little of the corn is ripe and small grain still is in the field, while in Winnipeg only half the small grain has been harvested. Late truck crops are vulnerable thruout the area.

Illinois' rainfall was general Friday and brought reports of rising waters all along the Fox and Illinois rivers. At Aurora the Fox was two feet above normal and at Ottawa it rose 14 feet over night. A cloudburst flooded basements at Pontiac.

The state armory was opened at Ottawa to shelter homeless families, half a dozen of which still occupied it Friday night, altho the rain had stopped. Many more were living on the second stories of their homes. A dam in the Illinois river, at Lockport, was endangered. Damage to crops near Ottawa was estimated at several hundred dollars.

The pitcher's job finds its parallel every where in life. There's no doubt about his being conspicuous, but consider how hard he has to work in order to stay in the limelight.

We are told that every eighth person has a feeble mind, and that every fifth person owns a car. That may explain the speed mania and accompanying death rate.

Fair Sued for $24,000 for Slump in Hot Dogs

Camden, N. J.—Leon Ferber, a former hot-dog vendor at the South Jersey Exposition grounds here, sued the exposition company for $24,000 damages because, he complained, the hot-dog business at the fair wasn't as good as the exposition directors represented to him and he was forced to close his concession stands after suffering severe financial losses.

He asserted that glowing promises of much trade in the succulent links were made to him by the exposition management, but that the crowds didn't arrive and the hot dogs died on the griddle.

WALNUTS WERE EASY PICKING FOR THE C. H. S.

First Football Game of the Season Was a Victory For Home Talent.

Circleville high school lifted the lid of the 1926 football season Friday by downing the Walnut high school team 13 to 0. The up county boys furnished unexpected opposition.

In the first quarter Walnut received the knock off and made two successive first downs. The Circleville line failed to stop the smashers of Walnut's heavy backfield. The line finally held and Circleville got possession of the ball. Peters made one nice run. The quarter ended with the ball in Circleville's possession on Walnut's 40 yard line.

On the first play in the second quarter Peters curbed left end for forty yards and a touchdown. He also kicked goal. Circleville's line was stopping Walnut's rushes. Wallace replaced Mogan at left guard, Marion went in for Dunlap at right tackle and Walters for Haswell at center. There was no more scoring.

In the third quarter Troutman ran ran the ball back to the 50 yard line from the kickoff. Weaver on a criss cross circled right end for 10 yards. Here Walnut held and Circleville punted. Both teams went scoreless in this quarter.

In the last quarter Circleville's line stopped Walnut repeatedly without gain. With the time of the final whistle drawing near Circleville threw a flock of passes. Maloney grabbed one from Peters and went for a touchdown. Peters kicked goal. Score Circleville 13, Walnut 0.

The game was played under an almost tropical sun, hidden occasionally by rain clouds. A heavy rain made the field a combination lake and quagmire. After the first down both teams resembled huge mud pies. The day would have been ideal for a swimming meet.

McCrady,	l. t.
Vlerebome	l. g.
Haswell,	c.
Mogan	r. g.
Dunlap	r. t.
Troutman	r. t.

Moore	r. h.
Weaver,	f.

Saturday, October 2, the Circleville squad goes to Washington for the first game of the South-Central Ohio league season.

HOW'S YOUR ELECTRIC BATTERY

Does It Need Recharging?—You May Have a Short Circuit.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—(U.P.)—If you don't feel well see an electrician—you may have a short circuit, poor insulation or inductive trouble in your body generator, Dr. Mae Johnson Work of Brooklyn warns.

Humans are nothing more than solidified electricity and disease is an electrical disturbance, Dr. Work told members of the American Electronic Research Association last night.

"The human body produces and consumes 362,000 calories of energy during a lifetime," she said. "Death comes when we burn the current too fast and fail to recharge our equipment."

If a way could be found to permanently recharge our storage battery the elixir of youth would be in man's grasp at last, she declared.

"The human body broadcasts its troubles and by the aid of electronic medicine, physicians are able to "tune in" on disease for every ailment vibrates at its own specific rate. It will be only a short time before physicians will be absolutely accurate in their diagnoses."

STATE FILED CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS

Columbus, Sept. 23.—(U.P.)—The State's first legal move to obtain the 2,002 acre tract near Apple Creek, Wayne County, for a feeble-minded asylum, was taken today with the filing of notice of appropriation proceedings on owners of four farms included in the tract.

These notices give the owners until September 28 to accept the prices offered them by the State. Condemnation proceedings will be started in the Wayne County probate court October 1, if they refuse.

Packed with human interest from opening scene to final fadeout, blending reverence, romance, thrills, tears and stirring adventure into one of the most remarkable stories ever shown in motion picture form, "Ben-Hur" begins its fourth and positively last week at the Hartman theater, Columbus, next Sunday matinee, where capacity audiences greet every presentation of this epic of the Holy Land, written by General Lew Wallace in 1880, and directed by the intelligent Fred Niblo. "Ben-Hur" is a creation that veritably chrystallizes the gamut of human emotions on the screen. Realistic to the extreme according to those who know their Bible and ancient Egypt under Roman rule; no wonder then, that the presentation of the many episodes of the Christian era and the Coming of Christ should be so heartily approved of, for the picture in a way, accries on the screen the same potent message that illumes the pages of civilization. From the opening scene showing Jerusalem under Roman rule, to the closing chapter depicting Calvary, the unfolding of this epoch making motion picture is greeted with rapt attention, richly deserved for its fine and reverent theme and expert characterization by a notable cast of sreen players.

Many superb reproductions of famous masterpieces are shown upon the sheet: Some of the sacred one such as "The Nativity," The Pool of Silaom and the "Stations of the Cross" are shown in natural colors. Among them is DaVinci's "The Last Supper" a work of art that is so realistically reproduced, that one imagines oneself standing in the Sistine chapel.

Two performance are given daily at 2:15 and 8:15 and seats may be purchased in advance, as every chair in the theater is reserved.

WALL STREET PLAYS THROUGH NOON HOUR

Traffic Halts While Clerks Stroll and Gossip.

New York.—Money is king in Wall street, but the people there are far from being the pawns in the continual game which popular conjecture pictures them. They are very human, apparently more so in their hour of relaxation than members of other business groups.

Noon is akin to the proverbial Saturday night in a small town, with only the slight differences caused by custom and environment.

The streets are only canyons between walls of memory, but then the sunlight shines straight down into the voids and its brightness is reflected on the crowds. There are no bustling shoppers here, no persons rushing to appointments or the hurly-burly of business hours. Noon is a time to relax.

All traffic except that essential to the district is diverted at that hour and curbstone boundaries are forgotten.

Walk in Middle of Streets.

Then the statue of Washington looks down on Nassau street, one of the few wide ones, where girls in there a lad and the "girl friend," promenade. Lunch is brief and they saunter about in the middle of the street until the clock strikes one.

It is the same on Wall street itself—which is hardly more than a narrow alley—or on New street, which a wide truck would fill from curb to curb.

There is a sociability about it all, and an excavation for a new building is sufficient attraction for as many persons as can crowd around the guard rail.

Patroling the streets during this time are the hawkers who reap their fortunes in nickels and dimes—newspapers, combs, novelties—anything that strikes the fancy.

The scene is entirely at variance with the activity of the street which makes a million dollars only small change.

Money is a commodity here, and all realize the futility of excessive display, except for the standard "prosperous looking" clothes which are affected both by bank presidents and $20-a-week clerks.

The president and clerk eat side by side in the same lunchrooms, particularly those where you wait on yourself and then figure your own bill.

This action of the banker, however, may be construed as carefulness, as even small sums now are guarded closely. This practice was evolved only recently after a series of holdups.

Take Precaution.

The same boyish looking messengers still carry the little black bags, but the bags are fastened to wrists by handcuffs and chains, making it virtually impossible for them to be snatched away. The kidnaping of the messenger is precluded by the presence of two or three armed guards walking behind him with weapons in hand in coat pockets, while the guards try to look as little like detectives as possible.

This quiet protection marks the street, for about the only visible policemen are traffic officers. For the rest, there is an abundance of plain clothes men and private guards in every establishment.

The Whippet

AMERICA'S NEW TYPE LIGHT CAR

It took the Willys-Overland engineers, in Europe and America, four years to design and build the Whippet. Spurred on by its great success because over 14,500,000 witnessed the showing of the Whippet during the first three weeks, other manufacturers will doubtless attempt to come out with the Whippet-type car.

The Whippet is the most economical, the safest and by far the most thrilling of all light cars to drive. Do not expect Whippet advantages in any other light car. Today the Whippet alone offers you these unique engineering attainments.

Woolen Materials Offered for Fall

Fluffy Fabrics Are to Have Call for Wear During Cold Weather.

Considerable interest has been shown lately in voile de laine, the familiar woolen voile of some years ago, says a Paris correspondent in the New York Times. Possibly because of the very lovely color combinations it suggests, Jenny particularly favors this material and has used it for display at Deauville, in an interesting gown of navy blue voile over a bright red underdress. The gleam of red through the semi-transparent outer goods is charming. The full skirt of this gown has huge swirls of navy blue military braid stitched upon it, the swirls being repeated on the lower part of the bishop sleeves.

Another gown from this same house, shown at the famous seaside resort, used the navy blue voile over a white foundation. There was a vest of white, inserts of white on the lower sleeves, and, most surprising touch of all, a band of red bordering the white crepe satin underskirt.

The wide sash of grosgrain ribbon has appeared frequently of late. These sashes are, in reality, very wide, but are too apparently so in front, where they are laid in folds. The bow, tied low in the back, is very stiff and dignified and the ends reach nearly to the skirt hem. Usually these are in black or in a color to harmonize with the gown. Cheruit, as well as Callot, has been known this season by the huge bows without ends that cover the front of her gowns, though these are made of the material of the dress.

Inspection of the new fabrics now being supplied to the dressmaking houses of Paris by the great French weaving establishments gives one a very good idea of what materials are to be featured for our fall and winter garments. Rodier, most famous of French wool weavers and the originator of kasha, has a new soft fabric called "ziblikasha," resembling very closely the cashmere of our mother's day. The suede-like finish of this material is very beautiful and promises to be more durable than that of duvetyn.

An older goods of very much the same weave, broadcloth, seems likely to share in the popularity accorded this new ziblikasha. Many of the bloused-back coats shown in the mid-season collections are of broadcloth.

For coats for rough wear, Rodier has a luxuriantly soft, woolly cloth called "Buravellic," fluffy as a fine woolen blanket on the right side though the under surface is of hard twisted threads. This goods, which comes in all standard colors, has an intriguing blurred look, the result of the warp being in a lighter tone than the woof. These two tones are frankly separated and repeated in a novel checked pattern in this same fabric, called "pied de poule," designed to be used with the plain material for trimming contrast. This check, which is quite unlike the usual square check, gets its name from its design.

Voile and Crepe Frocks Feature Handdrawn Work

This is an era of sheer frocks. For elegant afternoon gowns a favorite medium is georgette crepe in practical colors. These frocks, though sheer, assume a distinguished aspect through clever designing either in a tailored way or by discreet use of expert handiwork. Handdrawn effects such as the picture shows are especially pleasing.

Red Is Popular

Not only is red used alone for many of the smartest evening dresses, but it is especially favored for sports and daytime frocks in white combinations. The little two-piece frock of white crepe de chine, tub silk or Chinese damask with a tie and belt of red, is among the most successful models. Almost invariably the hat is also red and the bit of color is repeated in the bag.

Tea Gown

Odd but Proper Names

Divi divi, and ager agar, sound like eastern versions of Walla Walla, but they are, in reality, tropical imports used respectively for tanning processes and germ cultures. Jelutong is the basic component of chewing gum, while the mysterious sounding shuyu, from Yokohama, turns out to be a humble soy bean, used in this country for forage, but used in its indigent habitant as food.

By some historians it is believed that the Croatian Indians of North Carolina are in part descendants of the lost English colony of Roanoke, Sir Walter Raleigh's unsuccessful attempt to found an American settlement.

IMMIGRATION IN 1925-26 GROWS

Germany and Italy Nearly Fill Their Quotas Under the New Law.

New York.—Immigration during the fiscal year 1925-26, the second year under the 2 per cent quota act, showed a slight increase over that of the previous year, amounting to 4 per cent, but, partly owing to declining emigration of aliens from the United States, our net gain in population through immigration was 13 per cent greater than the year before, according to an analysis made by the National Industrial Conference board.

Total immigration of aliens during the last fiscal year amounted to 304,488, as against 294,314 in the previous year. Only 76,992 aliens, 17 per cent less than in 1924-25, left the United States, leaving a net gain in population of 227,496, which is 64 per cent less than the net immigration during the fiscal year 1923-24, the last before the new restriction act went into effect.

Quota countries during the fiscal year just closed succeeded more nearly in filling their quotas than in the previous year, due probably in large part to the better functioning of immigration administration machinery.

Germany and Italy, in contrast to the previous year, came very close to filling their quotas during the year just ended. Immigration from Great Britain (exclusive of the Irish Free State) actually fell off and was more than 4,000 short of its quota.

Large Net Gain in Common Labor.

A noticeable change revealed by the board's analysis is in the migration of alien common labor. While during 1924-25, the first year under the 2 per cent quota act, 15,106 more common laborers left the United States than entered, during the last fiscal year 43,543 entered and only 33,107 left, constituting a net gain of 10,436 for the year.

Skilled labor came to the United States in greater numbers than the year before, our net gain in this class during the fiscal year being 47,147, as against 42,422 the year before.

Farmers and farm laborers, however, came in smaller numbers, the country's net gain in this classification being 25,598 in 1925-26, as against 28,266 in 1924-25.

Professional people continue to come in increasing numbers, distinctly reflecting the great economic pressure inflicted upon their class in Europe since the war, according to the conference board's interpretation. While our net gain in professional people during the fiscal year 1924-25, the first after the 2 per cent quota act went into effect, was 8,367, our net gain during the last fiscal year was 9,041, again showing the rising trend of the influx of professional people noticeable since the war.

Canada and Mexico continue to furnish the bulk of immigration, neither being subject to quota restriction. Immigration from Mexico appears to be increasing, that from Canada declining.

Canada during 1925-26 contributed in excess of 91,000 immigrants, about 9,000 fewer than the year before, while Mexico sent 43,316, or about 10,000 more than the year before.

Large Nonquota Immigration.

While Italy's quota is 3,845, actually 9,374 Italian immigrants entered the United States during the fiscal year 1925-26, the excess over the quota consisting of nonquota immigrants, such as wives and children of Italians having acquired citizenship here, returning Italian residents of the United States, World war veterans and other Italians not chargeable to the quota.

Including nonimmigrant aliens admitted, such as students, visitors, merchants, persons in the diplomatic service and other governmental officials, a total of 31,739 Italian aliens entered the United States during the year.

The migration of Greek aliens, who are restrictetd to the minimum quota of 100, while much smaller in numbers, resembles that of the Italians. During the fiscal year just past 1,285 Greek immigrants entered the United States, of whom 100 came under the quota and 12 were charged to last year's quota, the rest being nonquota immigrants. Including Greeks not coming as immigrants, but as students, visitors and in governmental capacity, a total of 3,142 Greek nationals were admitted during the year.

The exodus of Italians from the United States, so marked during the previous year, when it amounted to 27,252, was still heavy during the last fiscal year, 20,004 Italians leaving the United States during the year, constituting a net loss in Italian alien population of 10,630.

Sisters Go Hungry, but Feed 48 Cats

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Residents of the section where the High sisters live complained to the police of mysterious odors in that vicinity, but efforts to locate the nuisance were futile for several months. Came the recent hot spell and one last determined effort. Thomas Flanigan, employed by the S. P. C. A., drove to the High sisters' home in a truck and removed from their house 48 pet cats.

The sisters are heartbroken at the loss of the felines, which they had cared for and fed, even depriving themselves of milk and food for the musical army.

Asked where they got so many cats, they said a friend who also had a warm heart for pets, sent them all the strays he found in the alleys.

Power From the Sea

The world's industrial power of the future may be drawn from the heat of warm sea water. Already some scientists think they have found a way of utilizing this latent energy. The warm sea water will, they assert, evaporate carbon dioxide or ammonia, and the pressure thus obtained can be used in steam turbines to produce tremendous electric power.

Ship 500,000,000 Pounds of Explosive; No Mishap

Washington.—Without death or injury to a single person, the American Railway association announces American and Canadian railroads during 1925 handled more than 500,000,000 pounds of commercial explosives — approximately 375,000 carloads.

Explosion of toy torpedoes, the association's bureau of explosives said, were responsible for 24 of 26 accidents in transporting fireworks, none of which, however, proved fatal or injurious.

Only 13 were killed and 57 injured, the bureau said, in the railroad handling millions of pounds of acids, inflammable liquids, conpressed gasses, poisonous liquids and similar articles. Ten of these deaths and 15 of the injuries were due to explosions of gasoline, and the bureau added, "one-half the deaths and more than one-half of the injuries due to such accidents were the direct consequence of trespassers entering empty tank cars."

Library Has Gain of 50 Per Cent in Year

Jerusalem.—The Jewish National library of the Hebrew university, designed to house the world's greatest collection of Hebrew books and manuscripts, now contains 125,683 volumes, 40,890 of which were secured during the last year, says a report of Dr. Hugo Bergmann, chief librarian.

Included in the rare and ancient books added to the library was the first Hebrew book published in America, "The Grammar of the Hebrew Tongue," printed in Boston in 1735 and dedicated to Harvard university.

Others were from the Fifteenth and Sixteenth century, published in the golden days of Jewish literature and scholarship in Spain, Italy, Turkey, Germany and other centers. The library is supported by the Palestine Foundation fund and the Hebrew university fund, which draw their chief support from American Jews.

TINY ANIMAL MAY SOLVE MYSTERY OF BIG GLACIER

Scientists Expect to Determine When Grasshopper-Filled Ice Was Laid Down.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—The mystery of Grasshopper glacier, just across the Montana state line outside the northeastern corner of Yellowstone park, may be unlocked by the frozen body of a tiny animal no larger than a mouse. The glacier has been famous for many years for the immense number of dead and frozen grasshoppers with which its ice is filled and from which it derives its name. The species of insects are modern, but no one has yet been able to guess when their swarms were overwhelmed with cold and buried in snow that eventually became ice. It might have been hundreds of years ago or it might have been thousands.

Now, for the first time, the body of one of the higher animals has been found among the insects. It is of a shrew, a tiny creature resembling a mouse in general appearance, but not closely related to the mice. It was found by a tourist, R. E. Belton of Livingston, Mont. At the Park museum its mummified remains were examined by Park Naturalist E. J. Sawyer and Vernon Bailey, chief field naturalist of the United States biological survey.

Though quickly identifying the animal as a shrew, the two scientists stated that because of the shriveled condition of the body it would not be possible to determine its exact species without careful dissection and measurements. Once this is determined, however, it may be possible to form some idea of the climatic conditions under which the grasshopper-filled ice was laid down, because the range of animals is strongly influenced by the temperature, moisture and other conditions of their habitat.

Find History Reading in U. S. on Decrease

New York.—History is read less in this country today than it was forty years ago, says Jean Jules Jusserand, who for years was French ambassador to the United States, and John Spencer Bassett, professor of history at Smith college.

M. Jusserand is not dismayed, however. "In the flux and reflux of human tastes and dispositions this is probably but a temporary phase," he says, "and it will be shortened if would-be historians and those who teach them remember the fundamental principles of the genre."

Despite vastly greater opportunity, made possible by "a brilliant advance" in teaching in schools and colleges, history is not in a better position with the men and women of this country than ever before, Professor Bassett believes. He asks:

"Since more of them have studied it in school, ought one not to expect that a very large part of our people should be interested in reading history and that a powerful group of historians should be writing many histories to meet this demand?

"But," he asserts, "no such conditions exist."

AMUSEMENTS

Time as the greatest jester of life, whose whims change the destiny of men, is the theme upon which "Time, the Comedian," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production that opens at the Met theater Monday is based.

The grim humor with which time transmutes situations and emotions gives birth to this production which was directed by Robert Z. Leonard with Mae Busch and Lew Cody in the leading roles.

The story opens in the early years of the twentieth century and becomes a chronicle of the life of a woman whose husband commits suicide when he learns of her intention to run away with his friend. Time as the comedian of life weaves the lives of these two in such a manner that confronted by his grim mockery their search for happiness becomes futile.

The picture is reported to be one of the finest of the many successful productions that Leonard has directed. Lew Cody and Mae Busch are said to be at their best with a fine supporting cast that includes such well known players as Gertrude Olmsted, Creighton Hale, Roy Stewart, Robert Ober, Nellie Parker Spaulding, Paulette Duval, Shannon Day, Rae Ethelyn, David Mir, Templar Saxe, Frank Elliott, George Periolat, Lillian Langdon, Jacques Abbott, Gertrude Bennett, and Mildred Vincent.

The production was adapted for the screen by Fredaric and Fanny Hatton from the successful novel by Kate Jordan.

SHIELDS OF ALL NATIONS LEAD FIVE-MILE TRAIL TO THE SESQUI

Through the "Way of Shields," through the old world into the new, go the visitors who join in the 150th birthday celebration of our nation, the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition now in progress at Philadelphia.

For five miles, from the intersection of Chestnut and Broad Streets, through the city, through the Navy Yard Reservation, to the gateway of the exposition, Broad Street is lined on either side by the shields of the nations of the world. More than a thousand shields, each 3½ feet high, representing every nation in both hemispheres, mark a gala trail of the brilliant, flashing color through the city.

This beautiful Avenue of the Nations is literally a glowing tribute to the old world nations who have sent their men and women to the United States, to become the bulwark upon which has been built up in a brief century and a half, the prosperous and progressive U. S. A.

It is an interesting commentary upon the prowess of these United States in arts and industries, that these battle shields, representing old ideals, old feuds, and old arts, are made of a brand new, wholly American product, celotex, a lumber created out of sugar cane fibres. It was selected for this purpose by the landscape decorators who designed and carried out the magnificent plan of the Exposition because it is weather proof, and because it can be decorated in lasting colors, which will retain their bright hues during the life of the exposition.

Home Made Sherbets Give Best Type of Nutrients For Body

Practice of making ice creams and sherbets in their own kitchens has come into wide favor with the modern housewife. Home made ice cream, or sherbet, is not only more economical, but it gives an excellent opportunity to the home manager of displaying individuality in her desserts.

Both of these frozen desserts are particularly adapted to the needs of individuals of all ages, since they give fine types of nutrients for the repair and upkeep of the body. It is easy to learn to operate an ice cream freezer, and fruits and milk or evaporated milk, which makes a finer textured product than the ordinary market milk because of its high solid content, are easily obtainable.

The appended carefully tested recipes give an idea of what may be accomplished at a minimum cost:

Banana Ice Cream.

½ cup lemon juice
2¼ cups sugar
2 cups evaporated milk
2 cups coffee cream
⅛ teaspoon salt

Scrape off the outside surface of peeled bananas, mash and rub through a sieve. Add the rest of the ingredients in the order given and stir till all are well blended. Let stand for 20 minutes so that all the sugar may dissolve. Freeze in a 1:6 salt-ice mixture.

Caramel Nut Ice Cream.

Caramelize one cup of sugar by putting it in a saucepan over the fire and stirring constantly until the sugar has melted and is the color of maple syrup. Add slowly one-fourth cup of boiling water and cook until all the sugar has dissolved and the mixture is thick. Add this to one and one-half cups of evaporated milk which has been put in a double boiler over the fire to scald. Add to this the beaten yolks of two eggs and cook until it thickens. Add one-half teaspoonful of gelatine which has been soaked in one tablespoonful of cold water for five minutes. Cool, add one teaspoonful vanilla and three-fourths cupful of chopped nuts. Chill and fold in one cupful of heavy cream which has been whipped until stiff. Last fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Freeze in a 1:6 salt-ice mixture.

Orange Cream Sherbet.

2 cups orange juice
2 tbsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. vanilla
1 cup boiling water
2 cups sugar
2 egg yolks
⅛ tsp. salt
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup cream

Boil the sugar and water for five minutes, then pour syrup on the well beaten egg yolks, stirring vigorously to prevent lumping. Return to double boiler and cook two minutes longer. Add orange and lemon juice, vanilla and salt. Cool and add the evaporated milk and cream that have been chilled and whipped until stiff. Freeze in a 1:6 salt-ice mixture. Makes 1½ quarts sherbet.

Ginger Ice Cream.

2 cups boiling water
1 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup sugar
1 egg
3 cups evaporated milk
2 cups cream
½ cup ground Canton ginger
2 tbsp. ginger sirup from Canton ginger

Mix sugar, flour and salt and add to the well-beaten egg. Pour on the boiling water slowly, stirring to keep smooth. Cook at least five minutes over boiling water. Add the Canton ginger that has been cut fine in a food chopper, and the ginger sirup. Cool, then add evaporated milk and cream. Freeze in a 1:6 salt-ice mixture. Pack in a 1:6 salt-ice mixture and let stand to ripen. Makes ½ gallon ice cream.

Iced Chocolate

2 squares bitter chocolate
3 tbsp. sugar
¼ cup water
2 cups evaporated milk diluted with 2 cups water

Shave chocolate fine, mix with ¼ cup water and heat over a low flame. Heat diluted milk to the scalding point in a double boiler, add chocolate and sugar, and stir until blended. Continue cooking in a double boiler for 10 minutes. Cool and serve in tall glasses with chipped ice.

Automobiles Predicted For the U. S. In 1926.

Columbus, Sept. 23.—(U.P.)—Automobile production and sales in the United States for 1926 is predicted by C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers Association, to break all records with 5,000,000 new cars.

Other points he made in his talk to 300 members of the Ohio council at their second annual convention here today were:

There is no saturation point for automobiles.

Business as a whole in the nation is better.

The two cent gas tax, now in use in 41 states, is all right if used only for road purposes.

People are buying closed models almost wholly, with sport roadsters and touring cars only being purchased where families can afford two automobiles.

Golfer's Hard Luck

Golfers never will be satisfied with their game. A fellow made a world's record—drove a ball that rang in a fire alarm. A wild hook went out of bounds, broke the glass of a box, hit the lever and brought engines on the run. "The longest shot of my career," moaned the golfer. "If it only had gone straight!"

Arrangement of Medicines

When arranging the medicine cabinet, place those drugs and medicines which are oftenest in demand on the front of the shelves and those for more occasional use in the back rows.

GIANT FLASHLIGHTS ROCK WHOLE CITIES

Aerial Photographers Use Powerful Light Bombs.

Dayton, Ohio.—When the convention photographer says "Hold it!" and pulls the chain of his flash pan, he discharges only a pinch or two of flashlight powder. But when Lieut. George W. Goddard, army aviator, takes a flashlight of a city he explodes bombs measuring as much as ten feet in length and weighing as much as fifty pounds.

The detonation is so great that it is not a few frightened girls who jump and blink but a whole city that is shaking and hundreds of thousands of eyes that are temporarily blinded.

Several night photographs from airplanes have been taken of Dayton and of Rochester, N. Y. Soon all of the nation's greatest cities are to be "snapped" as gigantic bombs are released over them with their warlike crash and rumble.

High Explosives Used.

The bombs are innocent looking affairs, resembling bolts of goods in a department store, but under the folds of cloth are separate compartments loaded with special high explosive powders concocted to give a quick brilliant light. Each of the compartments is connected to an electric fuse which explodes them all simultaneously.

The bombs are carried under the fuselage of the airship and are dropped by the working of a lever as the plane reaches the designated point. There is first a discernible stream of sparks as the fuse burns and six seconds later comes the flare.

So efficiently are the bombs constructed and so accurately timed, that, although of such large proportions, they are exploded completely in as brief a space of time as one-fifteenth of a second. So complete is the explosion that there is no afterglow.

Too Quick for Human Eye.

Never has the minutest bit of the bomb's covering been found afterward. The flash is so quick that although persons on the ground see the illumination it causes, they do not actually see the flare itself. It is too quick for the human eye.

In Dayton and Rochester photographers also were stationed at various points on the ground, in spires and on tall buildings to take panoramas of the surrounding country by the light of the bursting bomb. Some of these pictures have been exceptionally clear and have approximated daylight photographic work. The photographic plates are usually exposed when the warning trail of sparks is seen and are left exposed until after the flare.

The shutters on the cameras carried by the planes in the test flights are usually four times as fast as those on the average commercial camera. Some of these cameras are between four and five feet long with 36-inch lenses, measuring nine inches in diameter. They take photographs measuring nine by twenty-three inches. The usual height at which these pictures are taken is 3,000 feet.

TO GET TIME TO GO TO FRANCE IN 1927

A recent announcement by Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, that employees of the railroad who are former service men may have four weeks off in September, 1927, to go to France with the American Legion and that they need not forego their 1926 vacations, has been followed by a nation-wide movement of employers to take similar action.

company, the United Mine Workers of America, the American Federation of Labor, the International Typographical union, and scores of other employers and employees' associations and unions.

The Couzens bill permitting former service men in government employ to have 60 days off for the trip has been signed by President Coolidge. Another act made it necessary, however, that the employees forego their 1926 vacations in order to get the 60 days.

Essay Contest Date Is Extended to November 15

The date for closing the national "Back-to-France Essay Contest" of the France convention committee of the American Legion, has been extended to November 15 instead of September 15, due to urgent requests from the field.

Several hundred essays have been received from every part of the United States. The subject is "Why I Want to Go to France with the American Legion in 1927." Three cash prizes have been donated by the steamship companies whose 24 ocean liners will carry the 30,000 Legionnaires to France. The first prize is $350; the second, $150, and the third, $100.

Those eligible to compete are members of the American Legion and the Legion auxiliary. Three judges of national prominence will choose the winners. They are William Allen White, Richard Henry Little and Frederick Palmer.

The essays must give the name of the writer as well as the post or unit of which the writer is a member. Each essay is limited to 400 words. They should be addressed to the National Convention Committee, American Legion, Indianapolis, Ind.

Insurance Companies Offer Trips to France

Several insurance companies are offering free trips to France with the American Legion in 1927 to their agents who are eligible to make the pilgrimage if a certain amount of business is written by them.

One company offers three grades of accommodations besides an additional $100 for spending money. The first prize, including the best accommodations, railroad fare to and from the port of sailing and the $100, requires that $400,000 worth of business be written between July 1, 1926, and July 31, 1927. The agent who writes $200,000 will receive railroad fare, the $100 and the minimum accommodations, while $300,000 business written will provide for the medium accommodations, railroad fare and the $100 spending money.

THE OVERLAND SIX

The day of the slow, cumbersome bulky automobile is gone. A safer, more active, more powerful type of car has come to take its place.

The old school of engineering is rapidly passing out of existence. A new regime of scientific thought has started in America.

The change began 18 months ago.

You find this change in the Overland Six which embodies the most advanced, the most efficient engineering from both sides of the world.

America gave us performance, speed, pick-up and increase power.

65,000 were sold the first year, this accomplishment did not just happen, there had to be something to warrant such success.

Built to meet present day performance standards, you can drive it at 45 to 55 miles an hour with safety, ample power to master hills, 5 to 40 miles per hour in 21 seconds, full pressure feed oiling system, positive water pump circulation.

It will out-pull, out-run, out-accelerate and out-perform any car in its weight, price or size.

Safety is its real contribution to motoring, built low to the ground, hugs the road at every turn, banishes slipping and sidesway, which causes so many accidents.

Easy riding, big roomy inside for five people, easy to get in and out, room to stretch. These features you will appreciate when you compare it with other cars of this price.

Beauty, this car was designed by an artist from 18 of the best cars in America and Europe.

SENATOR VEST'S TRIBUTE TO A DOG IS RECALLED

The Missouri senator was attending court in a country town, and while waiting for the trial of a case in which he was interested, was urged by the attorneys in a dog case to help them. He was paid a fee of $250 by the plaintiff. Voluminous evidence was introduced to show that the defendant had shot the dog in malice, while the other evidence went to show that the dog had attacked the defendant. Vest took no part in the trial and was not disposed to speak. The attorneys however, urged him to speak. He arose, scanned the face of each juryman for a moment, and said:

"Gentlemen of the jury: The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog.

"A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he was a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces; he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens.

"If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by the graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death."

Senator Vest sat down. He had spoken in a low voice without any gesture. He made no reference to the evidence or the merits of the case. When he finished, judge and jury were wiping their eyes. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $500. He had sued for $200.

NEW RUBBER SOURCE DISCOVERED IN AFRICA

Capetown, Africa, Sept. 23.—(U.P.)—A rich new source for rubber has been found here. It has been discovered that the African Euphorbia tree yields a sap or latex of a quality comparable with that of para rubber.

A South African company has been organized to exploit a vast jungle near East London, said to number more than sixty million trees. The average tree yields three pounds of latex. Attempts at vulcanizing are said to have been quite satisfactory.

Stress is laid on the fact that labor is plentiful in the East London district and that the region is free from fever.

Not Frail Creatures

"Man is the frail creature, woman the strong," is a recent pronouncement of Sir Abuthnot Lane, surgeon of worldwide repute. "Nature has endowed them with greater powers of resistance and endurance than men."

Hope and Window Decorations

By JOHN EVANS

(Copyright.)

"IT'S exactly what I've always wanted to do," exclaimed Hope Chandler when she had been called to the office of the department store where she had been working. The manager had offered her an opportunity to try her hand at window decorating.

"You show some aptitude in that line and we like to give our employees a chance in their own direction. It is better for us—and better for you," said the manager.

The beginners in this line were usually given a chance to try their ability on the small windows that faced the underground arcade leading from one street to another.

"I'm going to do a perfume window tomorrow," she cried, gladly, to one of her co-workers.

"Oh—for the big drug sale?" asked her friend. "Great! Step on it, kid. You're coming on, all right."

She worked hard on the window that would display all the varieties of perfume that the shop was to have on sale. She laughed at the silly names on the fragrant powders and essences and yet she knew that in the marketing of this kind of ware there was much in a name. "Kiss Me" and "Flowers of Love" sold by their names, no doubt.

She was arranging a pyramid of ornately formed bottles in a lower corner of the window when the top bottle tumbled off its precarious perch. Fortunately, it did not break, but it tapped rather sharply the plate-glass pane.

"Dear me—how lucky!" breathed Hope as she bent to see if the pane had been scratched.

As she did so, she observed, for the first time, the slender figure of a young man dressing a window opposite her in the narrow tunneled passageway. He had heard the knock on the glass and was looking at her. He, too, had seen Hope for the first time.

Hope was embarrassed. Did he think she had tapped at the window to attract his attention? She continued her work with only an occasional surreptitious glance at the man in the window. She had seen enough of his face to know she liked him.

He was arranging cigars, cigarettes, tubes, pipes, ash trays. Hope had never seen him in the store. She wondered who he was.

That night when she left the shop she saw him swinging along the street. She liked him the more for his easy, graceful manner of moving.

The next morning she looked at his window. It was as artistic as anyone could have made it and there was something about the colorful schemes in which he had arranged the slender cigarette holders with the trays that matched them that gave the casual eye a sense of harmony. Hope decided that the young man was an artist.

Without seeming pointed in her purpose, she inquired about some of the other window dressers.

"Oh—you know we are having a good deal of work done just now by students from the commercial art school uptown. They want the practical experience and we—well, we get it done free, gratis, for nothing," a fellow worker told her. "The lad that did the cigar window yesterday in the subway store is one of them. Notice it?"

Nearly a month later she was standing looking at the first outside window she had ever been assigned to. She had put a great deal of thought and effort on it and had raised the shade on a stunning rainbow window of silks arranged according to the new science of color. It was an original idea. She had taken groups of colors from a book on this subject and had made charts in the window and labeled them as such so that passersby might choose and study their own colors, their influence, vibrations, etc. The window was attracting much attention.

"Pardon me," said a voice at her elbow.

"O—" said Hope, looking up into the face of the young artist.

"I must congratulate you on this window," he was saying. "I have asked about it from the management and they told me you were outside now, they believed and they gave me permission to tell you in person."

"You—you like it?" asked Hope timidly.

"It's splendid, both in conception and execution," he said.

Hope was adding admiration for his deep, rich tones to the already sufficiently large list of things she liked about this man.

"I am a director in a commercial art school and am, therefore, perhaps, not an ordinary judge of such work. I do an occasional window just to demonstrate to the students that it is an absorbing profession and one that is far from insignificant—even in its early stages."

"Yes—I saw you in the subway windows, did I not? I had dropped a perfume bottle and it tapped the glass. I—"

"Yes—I knew you were embarrassed because you thought I believed you had done it deliberately."

Then they both laughed.

It was not three months later that they admitted to each other that that perfume bottle, toppling from its pinnacle, had been merely an instrument of fate tapping to them both to take notice.

Blondin at Niagara

Sixty-seven years ago the great Blondin walked a rope stretched between the falls and the whirlpool rapids, across the gorge at Niagara, carrying a balancing pole 40 feet long and weighing 45 pounds. Later on he trundled a barrow across, and later on a man, H. Colcord, his manager. In 1860 Blondin walked across on stilts, this performance being witnessed by the prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII.

She Wanted to Go Abroad

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

ROMANCES are rather rare in most business offices, but in the Star Life Insurance association they did not exist. Numerous girls worked here—typists, stenographers, filing clerks, doing monotonous work.

So when Grant Bradford showed symptoms of being very seriously interested in Rose Fairfax, the new girl in the filing department, much curiosity was aroused.

Sometimes people wondered about Rose Fairfax. She was the daughter of a fairly well-to-do doctor up town. She had just been graduated from college. Obviously she did not need to work for her daily bread, yet even more obviously she was not one of those girls who work only that they may have finery. Most girls would have looked dowdy in the plain old clothes that Rose wore, only Rose couldn't have looked dowdy if she had tried. Somehow she imparted an air of distinction and smartness to anything she had on.

Then people began to wonder about Grant. He was considered something of a wizard in his work as statistician and received a really good salary for a man of his age. So far as his associates knew he had no dependents, nor did he seem to be a spender—yet he ate at one of the most inexpensive places in the neighborhood, never wore new clothes, and lived in a cheap rooming house. Apparently he had no extravagant habits.

So matters progressed and Grant Bradford and Rose Fairfax seemed more and more seriously attached to each other. Then came a reception and dance held in honor of a distinguished foreigner by the president of the Star Life Insurance association, and Grant Bradford with a few other more important personages in the office was invited. Grant Bradford asked for an invitation for Rose and felt sure that Rose would readily consent to go with him.

"It's thoughtful of you," Rose told him, and Grant noticed that she grew embarrassed and colored as she spoke. "I'd like to go, but I really don't think I ought to."

Grant said that she must have a reason for declining and Rose said that she had. She might have explained but Grant felt offended and showed it. So Grant went alone to the reception and the next day lunched with Rose without mentioning the rather painful subject. They continued to lunch together but there was a strangeness between them that the more observant at the Star office did not fail to observe.

Then one day Grant was late at luncheon time and he asked Rose to linger while he ate. It wouldn't matter if she did stay out a little over her allotted hour. "I was late on purpose. I wanted to talk with you a little after the crowd had thinned out and we could have a table to ourselves. Rose—I think we ought to talk things over. You wouldn't go to that dance with me and I've often wanted to take you to the movies or one of the museums, but you wouldn't go."

"Movies—museums," said Rose with something of a sneer. Then she thought for a moment and added, "Well, perhaps I ought to have explained, Grant, but now I think of it, I don't see that I owe you an explanation. You—you—"

"Rose," said Grant with some emotion, "I know what you're thinking. You're thinking that I've been an awful tightwad. Well, I have—but I've had a great ambition all my life—all through college—and when I took this job here I knew it was hard. I'm getting a decent salary—and I'm saving every penny I can to realize that ambition."

"I've had a sort of ambition," confessed Rose. "I really don't have to work so far as making a living is concerned, but ever since I entered college I've had an ambition—and I'm saving now to bring it about. So I haven't bought anything for myself. I didn't go to that party because I didn't want to spend money for a new frock—though I am a little sorry now."

"I'm sorry I have stuck to my ambition now," admitted Grant. "I've been a fool. If I hadn't been so stingy maybe you would have liked me better. I've longed to send you orchids and roses—to take you to the opera and to good plays—but always I remembered my ambition. Rose—I'm sorry. Rose—what was your ambition?"

"I wanted to go abroad. I'm going to go in June—at least I planned to go then and I have saved almost enough—"

Grant laughed, and there was a note of joyousness in his voice. "Why, Rose, dear," he said, "that is exactly my ambition. I've arranged for a three-months' leave in the summer. I'll have finished up this survey by that time—and—" He looked very intently at Rose and wished that her hand was not so far across the table. "Rose—dear—let's go together. I've enough saved to take us both. You can spend what you've saved to buy the pretty dresses you want—though you don't need lovely clothes to make you look lovely to me."

And when June came Mr. and Mrs. Grant Bradford sailed for France. Their steamer passage had been paid—it was the wedding present of the Star Insurance association, in token of the only romance that had ever come to pass within its walls.

A machine that plants cabbage seedlings with considerable speed has been invented by Abbe Bacle, the parish priest of the village of Treize Vents, near Nantes, France.
